For one family, the horrors of the Holocaust would forever change their lives.

In "Family Without Country in World at War," author John Doe tells the story of his family's struggle to survive the Holocaust and rebuild their lives in the aftermath of World War II.

Doe's grandparents were Polish Jews who lived in Krakow. When the Nazis invaded Poland in 1939, they were forced into a ghetto. In 1942, they were sent to Auschwitz concentration camp.

Doe's parents were only children when they were sent to Auschwitz. They were separated from their parents and forced to work as slave laborers.

Miraculously, Doe's parents survived the Holocaust. After the war, they immigrated to the United States, where they started a new life.

Doe's book is a powerful and moving account of one family's experience during the Holocaust.

It is a story of survival, resilience, and hope.
