Many of the early fighter pilots learned to fly in the Royal Flying Corps (RFC), which was formed in 1912. The RFC was the forerunner of the RAF, and it played a vital role in the development of British military aviation.

During the First World War, the RFC pilots fought bravely against the German air force. They developed new tactics and technologies that would later be used by the RAF in the Second World War.

After the First World War, the RFC was disbanded and its personnel were transferred to the RAF. The RAF continued to develop new aircraft and tactics, and it became one of the most powerful air forces in the world.

When the Second World War broke out in 1939, the RAF was ready. The fighter pilots of the RAF and the Commonwealth air forces played a vital role in the Battle of Britain, which was fought in the skies over Britain in the summer of 1940.

The Battle of Britain was one of the most important battles of the war. If the Germans had won, they would have been able to invade Britain and the war would have been lost. But the RAF pilots fought bravely and they defeated the German air force.

After the Battle of Britain, the RAF continued to play a vital role in the war. The fighter pilots of the RAF and the Commonwealth air forces fought in the North Atlantic, the Mediterranean, and the Far East. They escorted bombers, attacked enemy shipping, and provided close air support for ground troops.

The fighter pilots of the British and Commonwealth made a significant contribution to the Allied victory in the Second World War. They were brave, determined, and skilled, and they deserve to be remembered as some of the greatest pilots in history.

There are many notable fighter pilots who served in the British and Commonwealth air forces during the Second World War. Some of the most famous include:

- Sir Douglas Bader was a legless fighter pilot who flew with the RAF during the Battle of Britain. He was shot down and captured by the Germans, but he escaped and continued to fly. Bader was one of the most decorated fighter pilots of the war.
- Guy Gibson was a British pilot who led the Dambusters raid in 1943. The Dambusters raid was a daring mission to destroy the dams in the Ruhr Valley in Germany. Gibson was awarded the Victoria Cross for his leadership on the raid.
- Johnnie Johnson was a Canadian fighter pilot who flew with the RAF during the Battle of Britain. He was one of the top-scoring fighter pilots of the war, with 38 confirmed victories.
- Bob Tuck was a British fighter pilot who flew with the RAF during the Battle of Britain. He was one of the most successful fighter pilots of the war, with 30 confirmed victories.
- Sailor Malan was a South African fighter pilot who flew with the RAF during the Battle of Britain. He was one of the most successful fighter pilots of the war, with 27 confirmed victories.

These are just a few of the many notable fighter pilots who served in the British and Commonwealth air forces during the Second World War. Their stories are an inspiration to us all.
